Phillip Scott

Phil Scott has 39 years experience of first opinion and referral farm animal veterinary work. He is a Diplomat of the European College of Small Ruminant Health Management and the European College of Bovine Health Management. He is the author of more than 120 refereed scientific papers, four books, and many chapters in reference text books. He is now a director in a private referral practice, Capital Veterinary Services, which offers specialist veterinary services and continuing professional development courses. His current work is focused on the clinical applications of ultrasonography in general practice. He maintains a keen interest in ruminant nervous diseases following work on bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the UK during the 1980s.
